A compilation of memories from classmates

“Erlinda was fun to be with. What we can remember of her was when we got together she was very shy or conservative when it came to just showing her legs. She wore those thick stockings where you could not see through. When we had to take our swimming class, she was very careful not to show anything until she got into the water. Nobody really saw her legs. She was very fair and pretty (mestiza), so everyone was curious. I guess that's the funny side. She was a very good student nurse. She was very serious with her studies and work. She was definitely not a “lakwatsera” like us.”

From another classmate, this is what she wrote. “Oh, my gosh, I forgot about Erlinda. I was so out of touch with a lot of my classmates then around the time when she was ill. I remember being with her in her house and enjoying her company but I am remorseful that I did not communicate with her further. I wish I had more things to say about her. Sorry I am not able to help you.”

“Erlinda is survived by her husband and 2 daughters. The last time we heard, they lived in the East Coast.”

We hope that someone out there can convey our sweet remembrances to the family and express our desire to keep in touch.
